

mtda Terms and Conditions

mtda, its website, social media and the services offered are provided by mtda and are subject to the following terms and conditions. Please review them regularly for changes. If you do not agree to these terms then please do not use the website or any services offered including our classes on offer.

Health & Safety

Your health and safety is your responsibility. In the interests of health, safety, well-being and to help fulfil any goals and responsibilities, it is important to please inform us of any issue/medical condition that may affect your participation with any course, workshop, 121 session or service, offered by mtda. We will treat all such information confidentially. If you have any concerns about your health please seek medical advice.

Ethos & Culture

mtda firmly believe in creating a safe enrichment for its Masters and participants to work in, and actively promote an ethos and culture of equality, fairness, trust and mutual respect. It is expected that you will actively engage and participate in all sessions at all times working politely, efficiently, professionally and in a courteous manner at all times.

Recordings

Recordings of any sort including sound, video and photographic obtained from attending any course, workshop or 121 session online or in person are copyrighted by mtda. Individual recordings are not normally permitted and special permission must be sought for this activity. If you are given special permission by mtda to make any recordings it is assumed, they will be for your personal use only and must not be shared, distributed or uploaded to any for of any web-based media without consent. mtda may issue password protected access to footage of sessions for reflective purposes only and under no circumstances whatsoever should this material be shared or distributed with anyone.

If you do not agree to these terms and conditions then please do not use the website or any services offered including our classes on offer. Failure to adhere to the terms stated above could result in you being removed from a class or programme along with the forfeiture of any fees or deposits for said courses already paid.